Keele River Wilderness Canoe Expedition

12 days - 11 nights, Novice to Intermediate Paddlers

The Keele River offers an iconic Canadian wilderness canoeing experience through the rugged Mackenzie Mountains in Canada's Northwest Territories. This river served as a travel route for Mountain Dene hunters. Evidence shows humans used this area 12,000 years ago at the end of the last ice age. Turquoise waters flow from high in the divide between the Yukon and Northwest Territories through towering mountain scenery and broad valleys full of rugged black spruce with inviting vistas on every curve. Although fast and boisterous, the Keele River has lots of room to find a smooth path. As confidence builds, paddlers will seek the larger wave trains. The Keele has very clear lines and the choice to paddle smooth water or bouncy water. There are gracious campsites, big mountain vistas, no portages, very few bugs to worry about, and excellent hiking available. There can be sightings of caribou, moose, eagles, grizzly and black bears, Dahl sheep and great fishing for both Arctic grayling and bull trout. We don't always plan for a fish dinner but often if we have fishermen in the group, grayling or trout can be added to tempt everyone's palate with a fresh fish dinner.
